LIBRARY TRUSTEES COMMIT TO MOVING FORWARD DESPITE INTERNAL TURMOIL

By Gail Marvel
MONTROSE-Unbeknownst to the community, the Montrose Regional Library District (MRLD) has gone through a summer of turmoil. Issues kept within the MRLD family and only recently revealed call into question the District’s commitment to transparency just as they prepare to ask voters for a 0.8 mil levy increase.

For example, it was only recently discovered that on May 7, 2015 Library Director Paul Paladino gave 90 days’ notice and tendered his resignation. The condensed version of the situation is taken from the MRLD official board minutes and from a conversation with Paul Paladino. A staff complaint bypassed the director and went directly to the board of trustees to which director Paladino took offense, “Paul said he felt that action and the continued insistence by the Board on investigating the claim without first turning it over to Paul to see if it could be resolved through proper procedures showed a lack of confidence in Paul’s ability to manage the staff of the District. Several members of the Board maintained they had confidence in Paul and didn’t see their actions as undermining the authority of Paul as

By Liesl Greathouse
DOWNTOWN-As the cold winds blow in and snow begins to dot the mountaintops, it's time to switch out the sandals and shorts for boots and jackets. Many clothing stores have already switched out Summer clothing for Autumn outfits, and Hypoxia on Main Street is no exception.

Hypoxia is a retail store offering ‘lifestyle clothing for those that live an active and outdoors life!’ Owner Debbie Blanchard said, “It was opened because people in the area asked for quality brands such as Kuhl, Patagonia, HornyToad, Lucy Yoga Wear, Eno Hammocks, Oboz Footwear, Birkenstock, Salomon, Baggallini, and Sherpani.”

Debbie says that a common trend when it comes to Fall styles is the layering of clothing, and colors that focus on nature including greens, reds, and rust. The clothing styles that people are looking for are what you would expect for the season. “People want lightweight jackets, leggings, and lightweight bags,” she explained.

By Caitlin Switzer

MONTROSE-In an industry known for solemn tradition, Megan Hess is making waves by combining new ideas and energy with old-fashioned customer service excellence. And though her family background is not in the funeral planning business, her heart is.

“This is my love and my passion,” said Hess, who joined Sunset Mesa Funeral Directors in 2006 after working at another local funeral home. She later became an owner, and today owns and operates nine companies that can provide services to her customers. With the recent opening of Colorado Cremation, Sunset Mesa Funeral Directors can provide every service a client could ask for, and some they may not have known were available.

With five full acres at the main Sunset Mesa Funeral Directors location, the acquisition of the adjacent Log Home brings additional capacity for receptions and open house events. Clients can now choose the setting that best meets their needs, Hess said. There is even a printing company, for personalization of caskets and other items.

“Our companies enhance each other,” Hess said. “We can find just the right venue to meet a family’s needs—with our outdoor memorial area, our Sunset Mesa Chapel and now Colorado Cremation, we will be able to fill needs just a little more.”

Hess’s new Director of Marketing, Janine Bush, is well known locally for her outreach skills. “I love my job,” she said. “To work for such caring, compassionate people, I feel that I can make a difference, and that this is where I am supposed to be.”

The business of funeral planning is surprisingly fresh these days, with technology that allows loved ones to remember the dearly departed on social media, and to access memorial information with a smartphone or other device.

“People have been putting QR codes on tombstones, so you can scan and read their obituaries,” Bush explained. “And though not everybody realizes this, Facebook even allows you to designate someone else as admin for your page after you go.”

Pre-planning really does make everything easier, she added. Those with questions are welcome to come in Colorado Cremation for coffee and doughnuts from 9 to 10:30 a.m. every Thursday morning at 746 East Main Street. Colorado Cremation can also be reached at 970-249-1130.

JOURNALISM IS A BUSINESS; ASKING QUESTIONS IS OUR JOB

Mirror Staff Editorial

MONTROSE-We are experiencing an increasing pattern of executive directors, managers, trustees, and board members becoming offended and angry when questioned about their organizations and about decisions that are being made. The thought seems to be, “we are doing a good job, so please don’t ask questions.” Or, “We are all here for the right reasons, just let us do our job.”

Whether the person asking the question is a concerned citizen, constituent, member, voter--or even a reporter--it is inexcusable for leadership in government agencies and non-profits to be defensive, belligerent and go on tirades when they are asked questions—even tough questions.

As journalists, our job is not to decide things for our readers, but to provide truthful, well-researched and documented stories that allow them to make informed decisions.

Popularity is never the goal of a true news organization; the truth can be very unpopular. However, a community decision based on feel-good promotional materials rather than honest reporting would seem to be counter to the very spirit of a free, well-informed society.

Interestingly, most of those who become indignant when they sense their decisions and authority are coming under scrutiny are the same folks marching in the anti-bullying parade—so we will remind you. As a small, local, startup business, we have risked everything—our livelihood, our safety, our reputations—for the sake of our community.

It’s not a popularity contest, it’s about doing the right thing for our community and our Democracy. Thanks for reading.
NO FUNDS FOR GOLF COURSE EXPANSION YET, SWANSON SAYS

By Caitlin Switzer

MONTROSE—Though a six-year capital plan has been adopted for further development at Black Canyon Golf Course, it could be years before any changes are funded. At the Sept. 15 meeting of the Black Canyon Golf Course advisory board, it was noted that the 2016 golf course budget proposal includes $280,000 for business operation; $515,000 for turf maintenance, for a total of $800,000. Projected revenues are $500,000 with an anticipated $300,000 net loss.

Meeting minutes also note that a six-year capital plan has been adopted with “significant outlays projected over the six year period.” Though Public Works Director John Harris suggested a general work session presentation to “get the word out,” Montrose Mayor Pro Tem Rex Swanson denied that any actual changes are in the works. Swanson said that over the long term the plan is to develop a Par 3 course for youth on 7.2 acres located to the north of the current parking lot. Deed records show that the City purchased the parcel from Douglas P. and Steven DeJulio for $87,500 in 2014. Neighbors have expressed concern over possible access to the parcel from Hillcrest, which is already heavily traveled.

“Until there is money we can’t do anything,” Swanson said. “But as a golfer I would like to see this happen for the benefit of our youth; I want this to be a family-friendly, youth-centered golf course.”

For now, all that is taking place is routine maintenance, he said.

“If I am on Council for another six years, I am not sure we can even fit it into our budget in that time frame,” he said, “though I hope it would happen.”

“The course is in good shape, and staff is doing a wonderful job. We are very pleased,” Swanson said.

For the back to school crowd, brands including Salomon, Kuhl, and Patagonia remain popular choices.

Currently, to mark the transition of the seasons, Hypoxia is holding their end of season Summer sale, with all Summer items between 30-50 percent off.

With lots of new products coming in daily in preparation for the upcoming season, including new footwear, clothing and accessories, Debbie feels like it is Christmas every day. “New product coming in makes the store feel fresh and you just want to put on something warm and comfortable to take the chill away from the outdoors,” she said. “At Hypoxia, we enjoy the changing of the season, and so the store and its merchandise reflect [that].”

In addition to keeping themselves busy with Fall and the upcoming holiday season, Hypoxia has recently celebrated its one year anniversary. Over the past year, they have added several interesting brands, including Exofficio, which caters to people who travel and includes jackets with pick pocket proof compartments, and underwear for both men and women that are anti-microbial and can be easily hand washed. Customers will also find Bugs-away Clothing by Exofficio, for both men and women, that keep mosquitoes and other flying insects away. Those come in hoodies, shirts, blouses and t-shirt models.

For people looking for more options for water storage, Hypoxia now offers more hydration brands such as Avex water bottles, Hydrapak, and EcoVessel (made in Boulder, CO). For a quick bite they offer energy snacks by HoneyStinger, made in Steamboat Springs, which are all natural made with honey to boost energy naturally.

“These are all items we have opted to get based on customer requests,” Debbie explained.

Next, in Spring 2016, they will also be adding running clothing from Salomon Clothing.

After a year on the corner of Main and Townsend, Debbie still focuses on the core values of any good business: “We focus on great customer service and product knowledge,” she said. “We offer great quality of product and we stand behind our product 100 percent.” Hypoxia is located at 300 E. Main St in Montrose. They are open Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m., and in December they will also be open the first three Sundays 11 a.m.-4 p.m. For more information, call 249-1622.

METHODIST CHURCH PUMPKIN PATCH BRIGHTENS LIVES, COMMUNITY

By Rachel Boschen
Special to the Mirror

MONTROSE-The iconic building stands on the corner of Park and South First Street in Montrose and hardly goes unnoticed to visitors and locals, but people are drawn to the image of the Methodist Church even more when its steps covered in bright orange pumpkins every October. The message is festive and homely, alluding to the small town aspect of our community.

What’s more is that the pumpkins are for sale to raise money for the summer youth mission trips and were donated by an Olathe farmer who wishes to stay anonymous. The idea here stretches my imagination to see Montrose as a community where citizens can be trusted not to steal or smash from the 500 pumpkins adorning the steps of the church and to believe that our communities can come together for a greater good that can reach across the oceans.

The youth will be traveling to Belmopan, Belize to “continue to work on the United Methodist High School…” says Becky Clark, the director of youth and children’s ministries at the church. The patch is open Monday through Friday 10 to 6 and Saturday and Sunday from 9 to 3.

The Methodist Church is also having a fall festival on October 24, purely to “give back to our community children…”

The event is free and geared toward children up to fifth grade. They can play carnival games, get their face painted and bounce in the bounce house. Hot dogs are available as well, “the only thing that costs money are pumpkins if they choose to buy one” says Becky.

The patch is open Monday through Friday 10 to 6 and Saturday and Sunday from 9 to 3.

My September finished with another round of interim committee hearings, including on data collection of police-initiated contacts, considering possible ways to improve statewide racial profiling data, and the final series of the water committee’s public meetings in Walden, Greeley and Aurora on the proposed state water plan.

As chairwoman of the Colorado health insurance exchange oversight committee and as a member of the wildfire matters committee, I’ve also attended numerous hearings on these issues as well this interim. All of these interim committees will pick up again at the end of October to consider what, if any, new legislation will be proposed in the next session as committee-sponsored bills. With the interim committee workload on a temporary pause in early October, I joined a two member, bipartisan legislator team to India, for a program with Indian legislators and academics, organized by the National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL) and the U.S. State Department in India.

Our focus in working with the largest democracy in the world was to share best practices and field questions on how U.S. state legislatures deal with the many challenges encountered in our positions. I particularly enjoyed the amount of time we spent with young Indians, some studying at the universities in political science, foreign relations and law and others already elected in the provinces in state government. I shared what we’ve been doing in Colorado with our legislative youth advisory council, known as COYAC, which nicely provided a springboard of U.S. youth-identified policy issues to discuss with their counterparts, halfway around the globe. We also met with young U.S. foreign service personnel and I was reminded of the valuable work they are doing on behalf of our country, serving in faraway places and, sometimes, in as dangerous locations as those serving in our military.

State-level legislators that we met with were interested in discussing logistics of getting into office and responding to constituent concerns and requests. Our agenda also included meeting with faculty in several universities and those working in non-governmental organizations, also referred to as the Indian “civil society,” to discuss states’ efforts in civic engagement, electoral reforms and transparency in governance. India has the second largest population in the world with 1.2 billion people. Geographically expansive with a very diverse citizenry, they have a parliamentarian form of democracy and face many governance challenges shared in the U.S.

There was keen interest in the U.S. national political scene, the upcoming 2016 presidential election and how that will impact the work at the state legislative level.

I’ve worked with legislators in Algeria, South Africa, Mozambique, and now India. In this global economy enhanced by technological advancements, each U.S. state, including Colorado, finds competition and business opportunities around the world. Our academic institutions share students and faculty as well as the knowledge and skills that those institutions foster. We crammed much into the week of meetings and it was a great experience. I always bring home new thoughts and energy to what I work on at the Colorado legislature, especially in the areas of natural resources, the challenges of water scarcity and delivery and access to adequate rural healthcare. That Colorado chooses to have a part-time legislature enables me to volunteer my time in these efforts and I learn at least as much as I share.

COMMUNITY LIGHTNING RODS
Voices that spark conversations

“I CAN RESPECT ANOTHER PERSON’S POSITION” — SCOTT BEYER

By Gail Marvel
MONTROSE-The first interview question to Scott Byers was how long he’d lived in Montrose, “Forty years. No, no it’s 42 years. Well now wait a minute, 46 years. Yes, it’s 46 years. I graduated from MHS in 1976 so you can go back from there.”

After graduating from high school Scott worked in mineral exploration and traveled all over the country as a diamond core driller. In 1985 he and his former wife started the Montrose County Shopper and within two years Scott permanently settled back into the community.

Bitten by the printing-bug Scott purchased the existing Sir Speedy franchise, “I’ve always been a curious person. I thought about a print shop and wondered how do you do this…and can I make some money at it?” Over the years through expansions and relocations the printing business grew, but not without issues, “The franchise model didn’t work for rural Colorado, so I fulfilled my contract obligation and exited.” In 1998 Scott’s Printing moved to its present location at 315 South 12th Street.

Rather than participating in service clubs, Scott is attracted to business driven community boards and committees. He has served two terms on the Montrose Economic Development Corporation (MEDC) and four terms on the Montrose Chamber of Commerce Board. While on the chamber board he served one year as chairman and was selected as Chamber Member of the Year. Currently Scott is on the city’s Tourism Retail Advisory Council.

When asked if he’d ever considered running for an elected position he wasted no time in saying, “No. I get asked all the time to run, but I know better than that. I’m convinced you cannot have a business and be in politics. People get vindictive and try to ruin you. It’s really sad. It is such a divisive situation that I refuse to play.”

Scott acknowledged there is a vocal minority in the community who gets a lot of attention. He laughed and said, “I’m too busy making money so these guys can yell and scream at each other.” Scott however does not avoid politics, “That would be like sticking your head in the sand. I try to build bridges and get people off high center. I take it upon myself to try to fix things.”

In public forums Scott has no trouble confronting false statements, “I don’t try to call people out, but I’m not afraid to call them out when I hear a lie. Our integrity makes us who we are.” Speaking philosophically he said, “Things are what they are…polishing something and making it shiny doesn’t change what it is.”

With an interesting perspective of changing one’s position on issues Scott said, “I’ve never had a problem backpedaling when I learn information that changes my mind.

“It doesn’t make me weak to say I’ve changed my mind. If you’re wrong, why wouldn’t you say you’re wrong? I’d rather say I’m wrong and move on than dig myself deeper into a hole.”

Scott feels respected in the community and considers himself to be a leader, “But I work in the background. I never want to take credit for anything — I don’t care who gets credit, let’s just make it happen.”

Addressing community divisiveness Scott said, “We need to get back to the Golden Rule [Matthew 7:12]. We’ve forgotten how to be nice. You don’t have to like everybody, but it serves no purpose to be mean. I can respect another person’s position without agreeing with them. In our community it’s all about winning. So, what did you win when you won?”

On May 15th Vice-President Garvey chaired a meeting and stated the purpose was, “…to draft a questionnaire for employees to use to provide us with an assessment of the work situation at the library.” However when staff member Amy McBride said, “…her understanding was that this meeting [was] to address a mid-term evaluation of the Director.” Garvey rejected her understanding of the purpose of the meeting and reiterated that the meeting was about an employee survey. Bruce Grigsby stated, “…the resignation has not been accepted” (minutes).

For two to three weeks MRLD President Bobbie Sneed, Vice-President Tim Garvey and director Paladino met together to resolve the resignation issue.

During the May 21st meeting the board went into executive session to, “…discuss personnel matters, specifically, the status of the library director.” Upon exiting the executive session a motion was made and seconded to, “…offer counter proposal to Paul as was developed in executive session. Motion passed. Paul officially accepted verbal proposal and the Board indicated their appreciation of his acceptance.”

It is confirmed that this verbal proposal dealt with the withdrawal of Paul’s resignation. However, there is no statement in the official minutes that the resignation was withdrawn.

Sometime after May 21st, trustees Linda Gann and Bruce Grigsby abruptly tendered their resignations. In all three cases the resignations were not tendered during meetings, but were submitted to MRLD Board President Bobbie Sneed. Paladino resigned in person, Gann and Grigsby resigned through email.

It should be noted that unless excused from a meeting, the minutes for the MRLD board meetings are taken by Executive Director Paul Paladino. The minutes then go to board secretary Anne Gulliksen, who in turn submits them to the board for approval.

Two glaring omissions in the approved board minutes for June 18th are the resignations of trustees Linda Gann and Bruce Grigsby. The only hint at the departure of Gann and Grigsby is tucked under Committee Assignments, “It was decided the remaining Trustees would just fill in committee assignments as necessary, usually functioning as a committee of the whole.” While Paladino is given praise for his service and encouraged to withdraw his resignation, it does not appear that Gann and Grigsby received any such consideration.

Succeeding minutes up to and including Aug. 20th have no mention of Gann or Grigsby, whose terms would have expired in December 2017, nor is there comment about finding their replacements. When asked, Paladino did not know the dates of the Gann and Grigsby resignations and although he had discussed the Gann resignation with board president Sneed, he had not seen the Grigsby email resignation.

From director Paladino’s perspective the summer turmoil stemmed from a lack of communication and a lack of understanding, “Looking back it could be construed as healthy. There needs to be room to voice disagreement. There was pretty intense disagreement for a couple of weeks, but we set aside personal issues for the good of the community.”

Paladino sees the internal library conflict as separate from the upcoming ballot issue, “We kept working on the ballot issue and it continued to move forward. Even though we had different opinions on timing, details and the amount of the mill levy increase, everyone agreed to the need for the ballot issue.”

On Sept. 21st the Montrose County Commissioners appointed two new board members to fill the MRLD board vacancies. Trustees Sally Karo and Robb Ruyle took their seats Oct. 15, though Karo attended by telephone.

Two additional seats on the board of trustees will open in December. The cost to MRLD to put the issue on the ballot is $25,000, according to information shared by Paladino at the Oct. 15 meeting.

RIDGWAY—Ridgway was named 2015 Colorado Main Street of the Year on October 7th by the State Department of Local Affairs (DOLA). Mayor John Clark, Community and Economic Development Coordinator Diedra Silbert, and volunteer Eve Becker-Doyle accepted the award on behalf of the Town.  Director of DOLA’s Division of Local Government, Chantal Unfug, presented it at the Downtown Colorado Inc. annual conference in Durango.

Mayor Clark said, “I am honored to accept this award for Ridgway. We’re grateful to the State for recognizing the incredible work that our amazing staff and community volunteers have done to accomplish all that we have in the past year. I believe this is only the beginning for Ridgway. This award, as much as anything, is a recognition of our potential to make our town an even more amazing place to live.” The Town’s Main Street program is an effort to revitalize Ridgway’s downtown through asset-based economic development and community involvement. The award acknowledges and honors the accomplishments of Ridgway’s Main Street initiative in 2015: the engineered design of Ridgway’s $12.5 million highway and downtown infrastructure project, a survey of 70% of downtown businesses, hosting esteemed visitors, another banner year for the concert series, and promotion of community events, including Ridgway Creative District MoonWalks. Selection was based on submission of an application, a popular vote on Facebook, and a review of each Main Street community’s efforts. Ridgway competed for the vote with Steamboat Springs, Victor, and Brush!. Despite the short voting period, the community and its supporters cast over 1000 votes for Ridgway, more than the number of residents, demonstrating strong community pride. Ridgway’s own Lisa Issenberg designed and crafted the award. Amy McBride of the Montrose Regional Library District has raved about Andy Robinson and his trainings: “It’s not often that I’ve gone to a training and found myself years later relying on the information that I gained. But, in the case of Andy Robinson, I use his teachings on a regular basis as well as one of his books.”

Robinson, author of Mobilize Your Board to Raise More Money, is considered one of the nation’s most effective fundraising consultants. Sara Plumhoff, Executive Director of the Community Foundation of the Gunnison Valley, is very supportive of this upcoming training. “Any nonprofit organization, large or small, will come away from this workshop energized and with practical skills and usable knowledge,” she says.

The workshop is made possible by the Community Resource Center and the Western Slope Nonprofit Council, a group of volunteer leaders from a six-county area including Gunnison County.

Their collaboration and sponsorship means that the fee is only $85 per person for this full-day training. A limited number of seats remain; to register go to www.crcamerica.org/andy-robinson-training-series/. “WE SERVE EVERYONE HERE, AND WE SERVE EVERYONE WELL”

By Caitlin Switzer

MONTROSE—She manages a staff of 93, spends at least part of every day in meetings, and works directly with regional and state officials. With less than a year in the top job, she continues to build her own skills through training and education. Somehow, though, Montrose County Health & Human Services Director Kristin Pulatie makes it look like a breeze. “The learning curve has been huge,” acknowledges Pulatie, who was initially named Public Health Director and Interim Health & Human Services Director in late 2014, following the October 2014 resignation of longtime Montrose Health & Human Services Director Peg Mewes and the November 2014 departure of interim HHS Director Carol Friedrich for Ouray and San Miguel counties.

Along with a strong educational background and skills, Pulatie brought leadership skills when she arrived in Montrose in 2013 as Montrose County’s Clinical Program Manager and later as special assistant county attorney for child support enforcement services. And though she had spent a decade in Chicago continuing her higher education and working as a health policy and advocacy manager and as a plaintiff’s attorney for a private law firm, Kristin is originally from Arizona, so the pace of Western Colorado comes as no surprise to her.

“The expertise of our program managers has made my job easier,” she said. “I allow them to run their programs; they can come to me for support, but we have hired good people, and I don’t want to get in their way.”

“I enjoy looking at the big picture.” Through her work on the state’s public health association board, Pulatie has gotten to know public health professionals across Colorado, and appreciates learning from “the people on the ground, doing the work.”

Montrose County HHS’s recent drive-through flu shot clinic at Riverbottom Park was a true public-private partnership, with Walgreens Pharmacies providing flu vaccine and professionals to administer the shots.

“Our Emergency Preparedness Coordinator Don Angell did the heavy lifting for us, with Teri Watkins and Kat Smith,” Pulatie said. “It brought everyone together—there was a city liaison, and the hospital came to observe—and it was a really fun way to practice for mass scale inoculations, in case we ever have to do them.”

The drive-through clinic also enabled more vaccinations with fewer volunteers, she said. With the winter radon season coming up, Pulatie reminds locals that radon test kits are available free at the Health & Human Services Building, located at 1845 South Townsend Ave. “Western Colorado has elevated levels of radon,” she said. “It is a bigger deal in winter when the windows are closed, and in older houses with a basement—if you have someone sleeping downstairs in a basement, it’s a good idea to get a test.”

There are numerous options for mitigating radon, she noted; the key is to be aware of the risks in winter. According to the HHS 2014 Annual report, Radon, an invisible radioactive gas, is the number one cause of lung cancer among non-smokers. Radon is responsible for about 21,000 lung cancer deaths every year. About 2,900 of these deaths occur among people who have never smoked. Montrose County has one of the highest rates of indoor radon in Colorado. In 2014, 351 free radon test kits were distributed, nearly twice as many as in 2013.

And of course, in true public health professional form, Pulatie reminds everyone to wash their hands to avoid spreading germs, and to stay home if you are sick. “There were two dozen cars ahead of me in line, but I was out in ten minutes or less,” he said. “At no point was there any confusion or uncertainty. These are professionals, doing incredible, thankless work—it is truly, critically important. Health and Human Services is an essential role of government, because who else will do this?”

“I am personally in awe of these folks, because they make a difference every day, from providing immunizations, to child welfare services,” he said. “Kristin is young, extremely

National Weather Service
Grand Junction Office

COLORADO-Winter Weather Preparedness Week continues through Saturday, October 24th, as proclaimed by Governor Hickenlooper. Preparedness is a big part of this campaign. Before winter weather arrives in earnest, it is highly recommended that you prepare your car or truck for winter travel.

A well-equipped vehicle has adequate tires, tire chains, tow rope, sand or cat litter for traction, shovel, tool kit, windshield scraper and brush, battery cables, first aid kit, flashlight, extra batteries, blankets and/or sleeping bags, extra clothing, candles, water, proof matches, jug of water, high calorie packaged food for quick energy, and an empty can to melt snow for drinking.

The best way to prevent treacherous winter travel is to avoid it. This can be done by staying informed about the current weather and road conditions as well as the latest weather forecasts. Information on road conditions in Colorado is available on the web at www.cotrip.org or from the toll free number 1-877-315-7623. When calling from anywhere in Colorado, dialing 5 1 1 will also access the Colorado road reports. Additionally, a free smartphone application, CDOT Mobile, is available. Road conditions for neighboring states can be obtained on a link from www.cotrip.org.

If you should become stranded during a winter storm, stay with your vehicle and do not panic. If accompanied by others, take turns sleeping. Run the motor every hour for about ten minutes to maintain warmth, but keep windows open a little to prevent the buildup of carbon monoxide. Make sure the exhaust pipe is not blocked. Keep the car visible with brightly colored cloths tied to the side view mirrors, door handles, or external antenna. At night, turn on the dome light when running the engine. Exercise periodically by vigorously moving arms, legs, toes and fingers.

In the mountains, avalanches become a possibility in the winter, especially below steep slopes. Avalanches occasionally come down across roads, with little or no warning. However, avalanche control work is performed on many avalanche prone roads in Colorado, making the roads safer to travel. Caution is advised when traveling along avalanche prone roads, especially during and shortly after a heavy snowstorm or during periods of rapid snowmelt.

Very strong downslope winds occur at times mainly along the front range of Colorado. These Chinook and Bora winds can have gusts exceeding 100 mph. Persons traveling in light weight or high profile vehicles should avoid travel during these strong wind events especially on north-south oriented roads. Roads which appear to be clear in the wintertime may actually be coated with a thin layer of ice, commonly known as black ice. This nearly invisible ice layer can cause you to rapidly lose control of your vehicle. Black ice is most common during the nighttime hours. If you detect black ice you should reduce your speed. Please follow these winter travel safety recommendations which could save your life.

well-educated, and passionate about public health and human services. When someone is passionate about their job, they are good at it."

Pulatie said that she especially encourages the public to visit the Montrose County Health & Human Services Facility, which houses a myriad of programs that benefit the whole community. “I want everyone to know that I am absurdly proud of my staff every day,” Pulatie said. “They deal day in and day with the public, and they get the job done—they are well-trained, and professional. All different kinds of people come to our building and use our resources—my goal is to change the perception of what Health & Human Services means to our community. “Come on down, and we will give you a tour,” she said. “We are open and welcome everyone—we serve everyone here, and we serve everyone well.”

DMEA LAUNCHES NEW WEB SITE TODAY

Special to the Mirror
REGIONAL-Delta-Montrose Electric Association (DMEA) is launching a redesigned website this month. The new site focuses on user experience. It offers a clean, modern design, easy navigation, and updated content. The new site should be fully populated by Monday, Oct. 19. “We know our website is an essential communication tool for our members. Our most recent member survey indicated that 62% of our members with internet access use our website. It was important for us to recognize the site's value and make sure it was functional, easy to use, and meeting the needs of our members,” said Jasen Bronec, DMEA CEO.

Notable differences include a less cluttered look and user-friendly navigation. For example, members can quickly access the most frequently requested information through three large buttons on the homepage. Other features include full-site search functionality and a scrolling alert bar that can be used for emergency or breaking news updates. “In just seven years, the number of members connected to the internet who use our website has increased significantly. It goes without saying that DMEA needs a professional and informative site for a large portion of our membership. The new site meets those expectations,” said Bronec.

Visit DMEA’s website at www.dmea.com. Members can find information about the co-op’s residential and commercial efficiency programs, safety, community support, history, and much more.

Most importantly, members can also access their account 24/7 through SmartHub, DMEA’s online account management tool. SmartHub allows members to pay their bill online and view detailed energy consumption data. Yearly, monthly, and even hourly comparisons are available. Other SmartHub features include payment history, budgeting assistance, and tools to understand your data.

WRITER GAIL MARVEL VISITS GRACE BAPTIST CHURCH

By Gail Marvel

My visit to Grace Baptist Church took place on Aug. 30, 2015. The church, having been without a pastor for many weeks, is close to making their candidate selection official. Acknowledging a summer slump for attendance the group numbered eight; however, late arrivals increased the number to 12.

The pulpit this day was occupied by Jerry Lingo who began, “It’s good to be in the house of the Lord.” He then joked about a Scottish preacher who preached to two or three people one day and the next day 10,000 people came to hear him speak. Mr. Lingo said, “There are only eight of us, but the Lord said where two or three gathered in my name I am with them. It’s not about a building, it’s about the people in the building.”

Announcements included an update on the preacher candidate search, upcoming communion service, and schedule for fellowship events. Mr. Lingo said, “Times of fellowship are wonderful … especially when food is involved.” Putting a biblical stamp of approval on food and fellowship he said, “The Bible has many references to meeting around food!”

On the platform at the front of the auditorium two pianos sat silent, while prerecorded piano music served as accompaniment to hymns. Song selection from hymnals were, “Jesus Saves” and “Am I a Soldier of the Cross?”

The message came from the book of Jude, which contains only 25 verses. Mr. Lingo said, “We’re going to read the whole book because it only takes five to six minutes. We [believers] can all read the same book, but have different understanding.”

Putting the message in a historical setting Mr. Lingo said, “The church [established with the ministry of Jesus] was hidden from the Old Testament (OT) saints. What is a saint? It’s a person who is sanctified and set apart. All laws were given to point man to Christ. They [OT saints] had to keep all the laws, not just the Ten Commandments and it was not humanly possible to keep all the laws.” Man is not capable of paying for his own sins, “Only God could pay for the sins of mankind. Jesus was God in the flesh and His sacrifice on the cross was not just for the sins of the past, but when we sin today we have forgiveness.”

Elaborating on sin in our lives Mr. Lingo said, “Jesus satisfied God’s requirement for us that we might have salvation. There is no sin that God cannot forgive. Even though it [a sin] might come back into our minds, God has forgiven it as far as the east is from the west. Our stumbling blocks come from our own flesh, or from Satan.”

Mr. Lingo cautioned that we are living in dangerous times where false teachings abound; “As a believer we are not to entertain sin, we are to walk in newness of life. Man can pull himself up by his bootstraps…but he doesn’t get very high.” At the conclusion of the 45-minute service Mr. Lingo offered an invitation, “If you don’t know Jesus we can show you some Scripture on how to be saved.” In parting comments Mr. Lingo said, “Don’t be a “gonna” — gonna do this and gonna do that. Be a “doer.” Purpose in your heart to do something for the Lord. When God puts that burden on your heart, do something about it. Be a missionary here, right now. There is power in the Gospel…share it with someone!”

HEAVY METAL POLLUTION DIVERTED FROM UNCOMPAHGRE RIVER

By Tanya Ishikawa
Communications Coordinator, Uncompahgre Watershed Partnership
RIDGWAY-The Uncompahgre River should be running a little bit cleaner this fall after contaminated water flows from abandoned mines were remediated this summer. The Uncompahgre Watershed Partnership (UWP), a nonprofit in Ouray County focused on river restoration and preservation, completed two mine remediation projects in close collaboration with Jeff Litteral, a project manager for Colorado’s Division of Reclamation, Mining and Safety.

Heavy metal pollution from abandoned mines in the San Juan Mountains are a major source of contaminants in the Uncompahgre. Though the river above Ridgway Reservoir is not used as a local drinking water source, it is an important agricultural, recreational, aquatic and wildlife resource. Water from the reservoir is also used for those purposes downstream as it runs through Montrose, Olathe and Delta, as well as for municipal water.

“UWP’s remediation projects at three legacy mine sites in the Upper Uncompahgre Watershed address metals loading and acidic mine drainage to streams that do not meet beneficial uses for aquatic life, recreation, water supply or agriculture. Consequently they are on the EPA’s Clean Water Act’s list of impaired waters,” explained Agnieszka Przeszloskiw, UWP mine remediation project manager.

Funded by Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment grants, UWP began cleanup efforts at three mines last year. The first task, completed in July and October 2014, was to collect surface water samples and river insects from the Upper Uncompahgre River. These samples will be compared to future samples taken after remediating the polluted flows to determine how much water quality improves.

The first site to be remediated was the Michael Breen Mine, where the polluted drainage from a collapsed mine entrance was flowing from the mine across Engineer Pass Road and into the Uncompahgre River. This high alpine portion of the river was found to contain toxic levels of cadmium, copper, zinc and manganese, which impair aquatic life.

UWP constructed a diversion ditch to reroute the mine discharge and reduce leaching of metals into the river in October 2014. Re-routing the water also eliminated pooling under the load-out structure, stopping destabilization of the structure.

This August, a one-acre area adjacent to the diversion ditch and former drainage area was re-vegetated with a mix of native seeds, and anchored by an early ground cover species, a soil amendment and aspen mulch. Chris Peltz of Silverton-based Research Services LLC assisted with the design of re-vegetation prescriptions and installation.

The second completed remediation project was at Vernon Mine, where two draining mine entrances were leaching significant amounts of copper into Gray Copper Gulch. Besides the copper levels, this stream has been identified as having poor water quality due to iron and a low pH, which impair aquatic life.

This September, construction crews removed approximately 1,000 cubic yards of waste rock from the Gray Copper Gulch valley floor, and hauled it uphill to a repository in a flat area away from hillslope runoff and drainage areas. Two mine entrances were closed off and a small diversion ditch was constructed to redirect drainage from one entrance. Strategic portions of the area were also revegetated with a high alpine mix, soil amendments and aspen mulch.

The third project is at Atlas Mill, an abandoned mill off Camp Bird Road above Sneffels Creek. Mine tailings from legacy operations have been deposited in the creek’s floodplain, and erosion of the tailings and runoff during spring snowmelt contribute heavy metals, especially cadmium and zinc, to the stream, impairing aquatic life.

UWP is collaborating with the operators of Ouray Silver Mine, Inc., which is the property owner of areas within the project, and consulting with Western Stream Works LLC on project design to minimize erosion of tailings in the floodplain. Project implementation is planned for summer 2016.

“We all remember the recent and dramatically visible Gold Mine spill of three million gallons of polluted water into the Animas River.

Yet, every day hundreds of Colorado abandoned mines leak toxic heavy metals into our waterways – largely unnoticed and forgotten.

UWP is proud to have the opportunity to partner with the State of Colorado, private mine owners and contractors, and other stakeholders to begin to tackle this problem one step at a time,” said UWP Board Member Scott Williams.

CENTENNIAL 8TH GRADERS GET CRASH COURSE IN HYDROPOWER

Special to the Mirror

REGIONAL–Delta-Montrose Electric Association (DMEA) welcomed 200 eighth grade students from Centennial Middle School to the South Canal hydroelectric power plant on October 15, 2015. The field trip capped off a lesson in hydroelectric generation, bringing the textbook to life.

“The field trip provided the opportunity for our students to experience, in real life, what they were practicing in the classroom,” said Meghan Waschbusch, 8th-grade science teacher.

Students toured four main features of the hydro plant: the intake, the battery house, the powerhouse, and the switchyard. DMEA staff members guided students through the tour, explaining the purpose of each station and the role it plays in generating electricity.

“DMEA was exited to provide the students with the opportunity to learn about hydroelectric generation in the local community. Programs like this help spark an early interest in science and renewable energy production,” said Jim Heneghan, DMEA Renewable Engineer.

The South Canal Hydroelectric project is comprised of two small hydro turbines, totaling 7.5 megawatts. DMEA developed the project in partnership with the Uncompahgre Valley Water Users Association in 2012. Annually it produces approximately 27,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity—roughly enough energy to power 3,000 average homes in DMEA’s service territory. For more information about scheduling a tour of DMEA’s South Canal hydroelectric project, contact DMEA at 1-877-687-3632. Learn more about the project at www.dmea.com.

MONTROSE—Diners are finding new, locally sourced options in seven restaurants in Montrose since the launch of the Eat Local Eat Healthy initiative. A collaboration between the Valley Food Partnership and Montrose Office of Business and Tourism, Eat Local Eat Healthy seeks to connect restaurant goers with healthy meal choices made from ingredients sourced from Western Slope farms. To qualify for the program, restaurants must carry at least two Eat Local Eat Healthy entrees on the menu year round. These menu items can change but must contain a serving of vegetables, no trans fats or MSG, and have two ingredients (or a primary ingredient) sourced from a Western Slope producer. In 2015, Eat Local Eat Healthy welcomed The Bistro, Camp Robber, Colorado Boy Pizzeria, Daily Bread Bakery and Cafe, Horsefly Brewery, The Lobby Grille at Montrose Memorial Hospital and Remington’s at the Bridges.

In most establishments, Eat Local Eat Healthy items are marked on the menus or special boards with the signature beet logo. Often the farm or origin is included as well. In fact over a dozen farms supply Eat Local Eat Healthy restaurants. Montrose Bistro chef and owner, Nick Rinne says of the program “we participate in Eat Local Eat Healthy because we believe wholeheartedly in supporting the local community and a strong local economy by buying from local farms. By supporting local producers we are sourcing the freshest and most nutritious ingredients for healthier and tastier food.” Eat Local options include items like Pasta Primavera with seasonal veggies from Mattics Orchards at the Lobby Grille, Caesar Salad at Colorado Boy featuring aquaponic-grown romaine lettuce from City Farm, and Spaghetti and Meatballs at The Bistro with grassfed beef from Dayspring Farm.

In addition to educating consumers on more nutritious options, the program values the connection between Montrose residents and visitors and to area farms and ranches. Historically Montrose and the surrounding areas have been significant agricultural areas. Today, many family farms continue that legacy, bringing fresh, nutritionally dense, and delicious fruit, vegetables, meats, cheeses and more to our local restaurants. To find out more visit eatlocaleathealthy.org or facebook.com/eatlocalmontrose or by calling Valley Food Partnership at 970-249-0705.

OCEMS RECOGNIZES BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Special to the Mirror
OURAY-The Ouray County Emergency Medical Service (OCEMS) is joining other EMS agencies, firefighters and Law Enforcement across the nation in recognizing Breast Cancer Awareness Month. This marks the second year OCEMS has participated in the awareness campaign.

During the month of October, OCEMS will show its support by allowing its employees and volunteers to wear an alternate uniform displaying the pink ribbon and logo, which is a custom design for the department. By participating in recognizing Breast Cancer Awareness Month Ouray County EMS is displaying the values outlined in its mission to “truly care for one another and prevent illness or injury whenever possible” by bringing both cancer and breast cancer awareness to the community.

“Most of us have been touched in one way or another by this terrible disease. If participating in this program reminds one person to get checked and catch something early then it is all worth it. We want to bring continued awareness to remind men and woman to get checked through self-exams and mammograms,” said Glenn Boyd EMT-I of Ouray County EMS.

OCEMS views this campaign as an excellent way to honor those who are fighting the battle, while remembering those who have lost it.

“We hope to raise as much money as possible for our Bosom Buddies organization,” says Paul Derence, owner of Hot Water Productions. “The retail price of the hot tub is $3,495 and the starting minimum bid is only $475. The entire amount of the highest bid will go to Bosom Buddies, 100%, so we hope to receive a big response.”

Derence emphasized, “We understand that a pink hot tub may not be the best match to your existing décor, but the outside of the hot tub can easily be painted with any exterior latex-based paint to match the siding on your home or your existing patio. You could, also, build an enclosure around the spa to give it a built-in look.”

Hot Water Productions and Alpine Bank have been long-time sponsors of Bosom Buddies and their annual walk. Watkins Manufacturing built a limited-edition Fantasy pink hot tub to celebrate October being Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Francie Smiles of Bosom Buddies, said “We see the Hot Pink Hot Tub Online Auction as a fun way to raise funds to help those affected by breast cancer who live in southwestern Colorado.”

“We see the Hot Pink Hot Tub Online Auction as a fun way to raise funds to help those affected by breast cancer who live in southwestern Colorado.”

“This is a quality four-person hot tub which can be plugged into any standard 110 volt 15 amp electrical outlet,” said Derence. “Just fill it with a garden hose, plug it in and relax without the hassle of any special electrical or plumbing hookups.”

The Watkins Manufacturing Drift-style hot tub features 17 jets to massage away your stress and tension. It also offers an open-barrier bench to perfectly seat four people for socializing with family and friends. “In addition, this hot tub comes with a built-in cascading waterfall and multi-color LED light to create a backyard oasis you can use year-round. A gray spa cover is also included,” adds Derence.

Hot Water Productions has offered to deliver and install the hot tub free of charge within the Montrose city limits. Any delivery based outside of the Montrose city limits is available and the fee varies depending upon on the location. There is also an optional $150 service available which includes filling the spa and getting it operational, but the homeowners can also choose to do this procedure themselves.

Smiles added, “Fundraising is critical for Bosom Buddies so we can help the local women and men diagnosed with breast cancer. We have no administrative costs as our members are an all-volunteer group. It’s important to know that all funds raised are spent to support the residents of southwestern Colorado.”

Bosom Buddies offers financial assistance for a variety of breast cancer medical procedures including mammograms, ultrasound, and surgical consultations for applicants who qualify. Educational assistance is available to breast cancer survivors and to the immediate family members of any parent or guardian diagnosed with breast cancer. Hats, scarves, wigs, bras and prosthesis supplies are also provided for those in treatment.

In addition to financial assistance, the group also provides emotional assistance through their weekly support meetings which are Wednesdays, at 12 noon at the Bosom Buddies office at 645 South 5th Street in Montrose. Anyone dealing with effects of breast cancer is invited to attend.

CPW ANNOUNCES NEW CAMPING FEES EFFECTIVE NOV. 1

Special to the Mirror
DENVER - To assure the continued high quality of Colorado’s State Parks, Colorado Parks and Wildlife announces increases to basic, electric, full hook-up and cabin/yurt camping fees at the 33 parks where camping is available, effective Nov. 1. This is the first increase in camping fees since 2010. Our wonderful state parks require a large amount of maintenance, and rising costs of utilities, equipment and personnel has made this fee increase imperative, said CPW Statewide Parks Pass and Reservations Coordinator, Devon Adams.

The change was approved by the Colorado Parks and Wildlife Commission at its September meeting. Depending upon the type of site, fee increases range from $2 to $10 per night.

Yurts and cabins incurred the greatest hike, but CPW notes the experience for campers provides a cost-effective getaway. Some of Colorado’s most pristine sights and panoramic views are found at state parks that offer cabins and yurts, some still as low as $70/night, adds Adams. It is a great deal and no wonder our most popular camping sites fill up six months in advance.

CPW has more than 3,900 campsites available, many including electrical hookups and close-by restroom and shower facilities, plus 50 cabins and yurts located throughout the state at elevations ranging from approximately 3,800 to 9,400 feet. More information is available at https://cpw.state.co.us/placestogo/parks/Pages/ParkMap.aspx. Almost 300 campsites are ADA accessible.

The current camping fees will not change for those who have already made future reservations. Most camping fees range from $10 - $28, not including the reservation fee and park pass. Every vehicle entering the park, including RVs and towed vehicles, must have a park pass for each day. Annual park passes are $70, and most daily parks passes are $7.

Check out http://cpw.state.co.us/buyapply/Pages/Reservations.aspx or call 303-470-1144 for more information.

Some discounts are available to permanently and totally disabled Colorado residents and residents 64 years of age or older, Sundays to Thursdays, with appropriate documentation. The CPW Communication Center is prepared to answer all your camping and reservation questions, call 303-297-1192.

EIGHT COLO. LIBRARIES PILOT CPW’S PARK PASS, BACKPACK CHECK-OUT PROGRAM!

Special to the Mirror
DENVER - Eight Colorado State Libraries in collaboration with Colorado Parks and Wildlife prepare to pilot the Check-Out Colorado State Park Program beginning this October.

Check-Out Colorado State Park Program is an initiative offering residents the ability to reserve and check-out one of two, seven-day, hang-tag, park passes for entrance into all 42 state parks along with an adventure backpack, provided by Osprey, that is filled with park information and educational activities.

This program puts us on track with the Governor’s initiative to encourage Coloradans, particularly children, teens and the underserved, to develop deeper connections with the natural environment that sets Colorado apart as a special place, said CPW Director Bob Broscheid.

The pilot showcases Colorados quality state parks system and improves resident accessibility, goals common to both CPW and Colorado State Library.

We are excited to partner with another state agency in a way that enhances the goals of both agencies, adds Morris. Based on annual visits of selected libraries, the goal may be within reach.

The estimated exposure, based on annual visits to libraries in Grand Junction, Rifle, Paonia, Aurora, Brighton, Denver, Las Animas and Trinidad, exceeds eight million. Libraries will provide quarterly reports based on user feedback to CPW to identify the usage of the State Park Pass Program at each location and patron experience.

The pilot is slated to continue through March 31, 2016, and if successful, will follow with expanded roll out of the CPW State Park Check-Out Program, in April 2016.
